01

The tax on a listing is the seller's bill

A listing shows what the seller pays now. Your bill will be figured a different way, starting the January after you buy.

Picture two houses on the same street. They're the same size and the same age. One owner has lived there for twenty years. The other bought last year. The long-time owner pays far less tax. The houses are alike, so why?

In Florida, two things lower the bill for people who live in their home. One is an exemption. It takes some value off the top. The other is a cap. It slows how fast the taxed value can rise. Both belong to the owner, not to the house.

When the house sells, both come off. On the January 1 after you buy, the county sets the taxed value back to the home's market value. Your own exemption and cap then start from there, if you file for them.

So don't budget on the listing. Budget on what the house is worth now. The state's own guide for new Florida owners says it plainly. Many new owners are surprised when their bill is higher than the last owner's.

What homestead is

Homestead is a tax break for the home you live in. It takes value off the top before your tax is figured.

The home must be your permanent home on January 1. Then you apply with the county property appraiser by March 1. In Manatee and Sarasota you can apply online. Once it's granted, it stays on the home each year while you live there.

The break comes in two parts. The first part takes 25,000 dollars off the home's value. That part counts against every tax on your bill, school taxes too.

The second part takes a bit more off. In 2026 it's 26,411 dollars. It only counts on the value above 50,000 dollars. And it skips school taxes. This part rises a little each January with inflation.

If you miss March 1, the law allows a late application only in a few cases. The appraiser decides. Don't count on it. Miss the date, and you pay the full bill for a year.

Save Our Homes: the cap

Once you have homestead, the value your tax is figured on can rise only a little each year. That's the cap.

Every home has two values on the county's books. The first is the market value. The appraiser calls it the just value. It can jump a lot in a hot year.

The second is the assessed value. That's the one your tax is figured on. With homestead, it can rise by no more than 3 percent a year. If prices in general rose less than that, it rises by that smaller amount. In 2026 the cap is 2.7 percent.

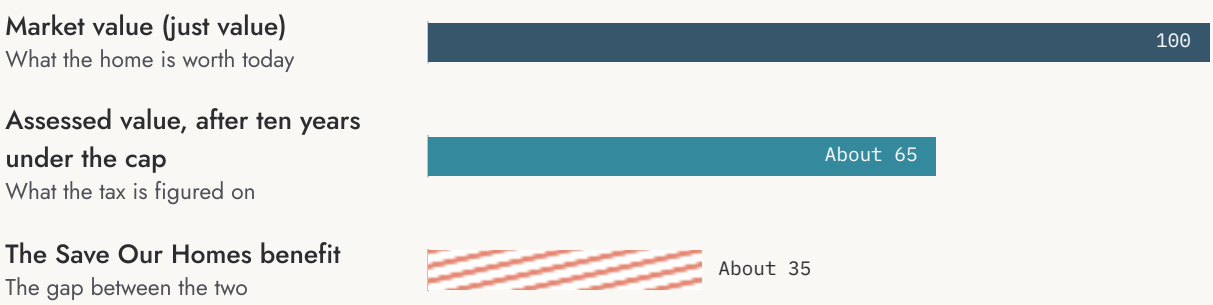

The gap between the two values is your Save Our Homes benefit. After many years of rising prices, the gap can be big. That's why the long-time owner's bill is so small.

The cap starts the year after your homestead starts. In your first year, the assessed value is the market value. From the second year on, it's capped.

FIG. 03 · TWO VALUES

Same house, two values

Each bar is one number for the same house. The gap is the owner's benefit.

These numbers are made up to show the idea. Here the market value doubled in ten years while the assessed value rose 3 percent a year. A real home has its own numbers on the appraiser's site.

04

The reset: what happens the January after you buy

The seller's exemption and cap stay on the bill through December 31. On the next January 1, the value resets, and your own break can begin.

In the year you buy, nothing changes on the county's books. The seller's exemption and cap stay through December 31. That year's bill still carries their breaks.

On the January 1 after you buy, the appraiser takes the seller's breaks off. The assessed value becomes the market value. Live there on that January 1 and file by March 1. Then your own homestead comes off that value the same year.

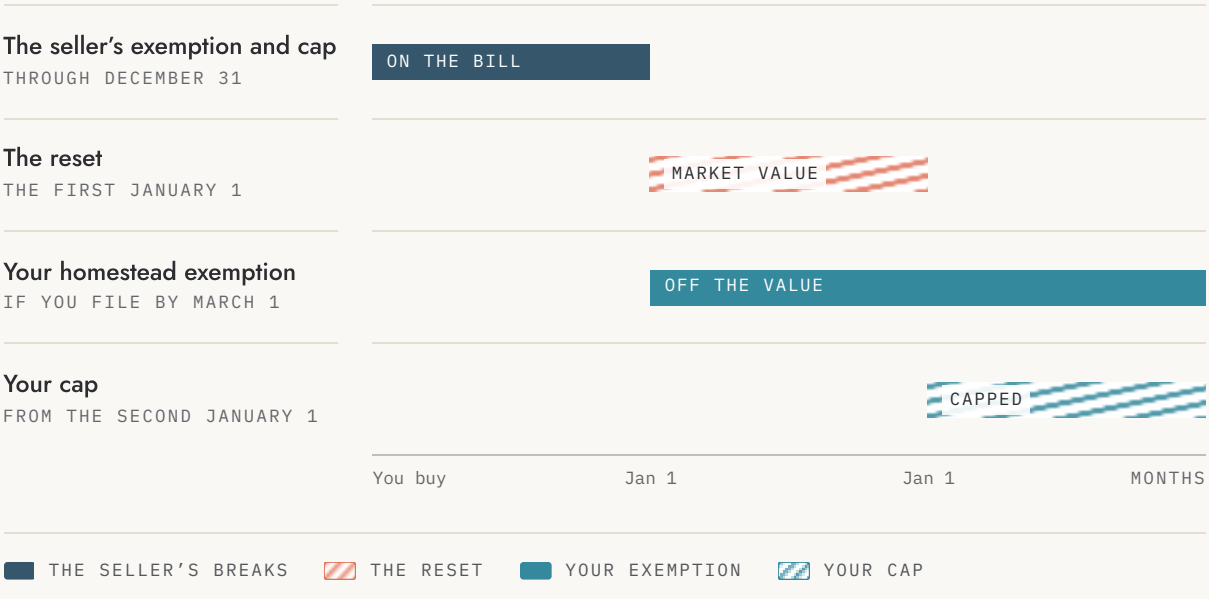

Your cap begins the year after that. So your bill runs in three steps: the seller's year, the reset year, and then the capped years.

There's one way to soften the reset. If you had a Florida homestead before, you may carry part of your old cap to the new house. The next section explains.

FIG. 04 · THREE YEARS

Portability: what you can carry to the next house

If you're moving from one Florida homestead to another, you can take some or all of your cap's benefit with you.

Remember the gap between the market value and the assessed value? Florida lets you move that gap to your next homestead. The state calls it portability. The most you can carry is 500,000 dollars.

There's a clock. You must set up the new homestead within three years of January 1 of the year you left the old one. The state's brochure is careful to say it's not three years from the sale date.

If the new home is worth more, you carry the whole gap, up to the limit. If it's worth less, you carry the same share of the value, not the same dollars.

Form DR-501T

The form that moves the gap. Its full name is the Transfer of Homestead Assessment Difference. File it with your homestead application by March 1. The homestead application alone doesn't move the gap.

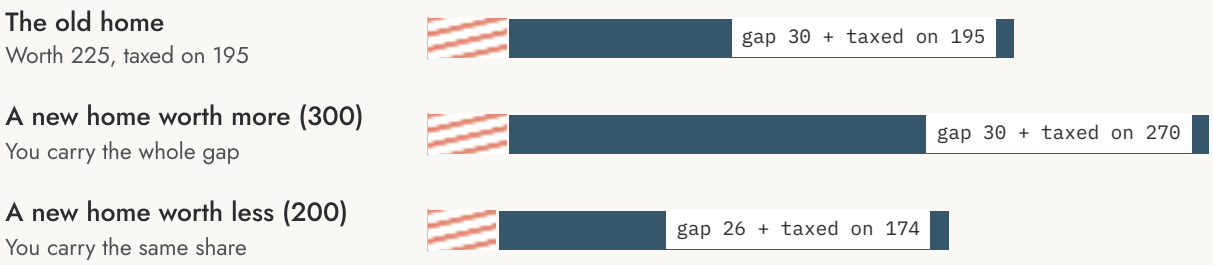

SOURCE Florida Department of Revenue, Transfer of Homestead Assessment Difference, form DR-501T (PDF)

The Legislature rewrote this part of the law in 2026, starting with the 2027 tax roll. The 500,000 dollar limit and the three-year clock are the same in the new text. Check the current rule the year you move.

FIG. 05 · THE COUNTY'S EXAMPLE

Carrying a 30,000 dollar gap to a new home

Each bar is a home's market value, in thousands of dollars. The hatched part at the start is the gap that isn't taxed.

The numbers come from the Manatee County appraiser's own example, in thousands of dollars. The old gap was 30,000 dollars, about 13 percent of the old home's value. Moving down, 13 percent of 200,000 is about 26,000.

Four dates in the tax year

The property tax year runs on a few fixed dates. Knowing them tells you when your bill will change.

January 1 is the day that counts. The county values every home as of that day. It's also the day you must be living in the home to get homestead for that year.

March 1 is the last day to file for homestead, and for portability. Both counties take the application online.

In August the appraiser mails a notice of proposed property taxes. It's called the TRIM notice. It isn't a bill. It shows your value, your exemptions and the tax each local government proposes. If something looks wrong, that's the time to ask.

In November the tax collector mails the bill. You get a small discount for paying early. The taxes are due by the next March 31.

What voters decide in November 2026

A change to Florida's constitution is on the November 3, 2026 ballot. If it passes, the homestead exemption would grow a lot from 2027.

The Legislature put Amendment 3 on the ballot. It needs 60 percent of the vote to pass. Until then, the rules in this guide stand.

If it passes, the part of the exemption that skips school taxes would grow. It would be up to 150,000 dollars in 2027 and up to 250,000 dollars in 2028. The first 25,000 dollars off school taxes would stay as it is.

The cap and portability would not change. A homestead set up by someone new to Florida in 2027 or later would start smaller. We'll update this guide after the vote.

Before you buy: your tax homework

Five things to do, in order. The first two take ten minutes on the appraiser's website.

FIG. 08 · THE CHECKLIST

Five things to do before you buy

Go in order. Each step helps with the next one.

- ☐ 01 Look up the home on the county appraiser's site
  Note the market (just) value, the assessed value and the exemptions. The gap is what comes off when the home sells.
- ☐ 02 Figure your own first full-year bill
  Start from the market value, not the seller's bill. Take off your exemption. Some appraiser sites have a tax estimator.
- ☐ 03 Mark March 1 on your calendar
  File for homestead online in the first year you live there on January 1.
- ☐ 04 If you're selling a Florida homestead, file the portability form too
  Form DR-501T, with the homestead application, by March 1. Within three years of January 1 of the year you left the old home.
- ☐ 05 Read the TRIM notice in August
  Check the value and the exemptions. Ask the appraiser's office if something is missing.
